While all scanners, including the Plustek 7500i, come with their own scanning software packages, there are plenty of third-party options available as well that promise to give you better results and speedier processing. We took a look at the latest version of Hamrick's VueScan, which is compatible with a huge number of popular scanners (around 750) including the Plustek, with a full list online.

The latest version of the software (version 8.4.62) was released in February and gives added compatibility with scanners, including support for variable exposure of the new Plustek models. A free trial is available from the website (images are watermarked), and it costs just under $40 (£20) to buy the standard package, working on both Windows and Mac.

Installation of the program takes only a few minutes and the program automatically launches. The main window is incredibly easy to get to grips with, working in a step-by-step format to scanning in your images, negatives or slides.

To get started, pop your media in the scanner, make sure that your scanner is selected in the Source drop-down (our scanner was recognised immediately) and hit Preview. When this is done, you can use the Crop, Filter, Color and Output options to enhance and restore your image. When you hit Scan, the image is imported and then any adjustments you made are applied.

It is extremely easy to get good results, and we found it to be more intuitive than many generic packages included with scanners as standard.

Rating: 4/5
